"Topic 1" A story I almost share with anyone and everyone is the part of my life, without which everything feels incomplete. It expresses my identity, interest, and even talent. It may sound little confusing, but my TRAVELLING story will contain a lot about me. I've grown up in a small town Panchagarh, in Bangladesh. I have always been a book lover, and thus I saw the world through the eyes of the writers. Travelling around never attracted me much, even when I got a chance to visit Darjeeling for the first time, I refused it as I wanted to stay home and complete reading "A Thousand Splendid Suns" by Khaled Hosseini. Fortunately, I was forced to visit Darjeeling, and my life changed! This story may reveal my love story with mountains, but for me it is my proud identity of a "Mountain Lover". It may seem a simple travel story, in reality it will show how a hobby or interest can shape one's life. At the very beginning of my college life at Aligarh Muslim University, my father came to India to make his first visit to Darjeeling, and insisted me to join him. After few refusals I agreed to make the trip. Seeing big cities or villages getting smaller as we were going up to the hills made me realize how small we are, and the lights of those cities underneath made me feel stars can be in both the sky and in ground. It also showed me darkness and silence are one of the best pairs. My book reading hobby just got a new level, "reading books in the hills". Visiting Kashmir, Shimla, Nainital, Kedarnath taught me the actual definition of meditation. After giving up so many times while the mighty Kedarnath trek, reaching top at the temple convinced me, giving up is never a solution to anything! The above story expresses a girl's story of identity, and interest. This amazing attraction to hills generated an outstanding talent in me, and that is money management. I was never a good money manager. But planning to visit as more as hill stations while my stay in India made me a pro! Proper utilizing of different travel blogs and vlogs, making a perfect expenditure plan that makes a good saving, efficient study planning to cope up with busy lab and classes routine of Biochemistry are some of the desiring talents I acquire because of being a hill lover. I believe it made me a better human being and "self-dependent" daughter my father always wanted me to be. This helped me become the first and only Bangladeshi "Head Girl" of my hostel in AMU. There may be a lot of better stories of travelling, but my one is a major piece of my life, without which not only this application, my life is incomplete.
